WALK THE WALK

Raise a global leader.

Walk the Walk (WTW) is a four part program designed for parents and guardians of youth. Participants will; learn to how to have difficult conversations, practice communication methods based on youth developmental stages, explore parenting techniques that build leadership, and understand the strengths of family culture and identity in raising youth.

How does it work?

- Roots & Wings Training Facilitators lead four workshops
- Participants learn how to develop and support identity based leadership skills in their youth
- Participants are given tools to continue practicing with other guardians in their community
- We supply all materials needed for WTW and offer ongoing consultation before, during and after

What are people saying?

“Roots & Wings is a wonderful organization that provides numerous benefits not just to its young participants, but to their parents as well. The programming offered by this organization is targeted, well supported by research around culture, language, and communication. As a parent raising kids in a more connected and diverse world the conversations opened my eyes and taught me much.”
